Summer Study Group

NEW STUDY BEGINS ON JUNE 5

This summer, starting June 5, the Faith Sunday School class is excited about starting a new study and we hope you will join us. Audrey and John Booher will be leading a discussion of the book, The Next Christians, by Gabe Lyons. Turn on a cable news show or pick up any news magazine, and you get the impression that Christian America is on its last leg. The once dominant faith is now facing rapidly declining church attendance, waning political influence, and an abysmal public perception. More than 76% of Americans self-identify as Christians, but many today are ashamed to carry the label. While many Christians are bemoaning their faith's decline, Gabe Lyons is optimistic that Christianity's best days are yet to come. We hope you find the book thought-provoking and will join this summer in an exciting discussion of The Next Christians. We have copies of the book, so if you would like to join us, come and get a copy this Sunday and start reading ahead. We meet each Sunday at 9:30 a.m. in the Mission Center between the Mary and Joseph and Anchor classrooms. Come join us for what promises to be an exciting summer!

DWM INSTALLATION OF OFFICERS - JUNE 12

The installation of the new officers for the DWM will be on Sunday, June 12, during the 10:45 a.m. worship service. Please plan to attend and participate if you are a new officer.

The congregation can be supportive with attendance and encouragement for the officers as they move into the new program year for Women's Ministry.

SUMMER CELEBRATION - JULY 3

On Sunday, July 3, there will be a summer celebration in the gym immediately following the 10:45 service. The celebration is for all church folks, visitors, neighbors and friends, so mark that on your calendar. There will be a light lunch (for which reservations are needed), musical entertainment and good fellowship. So, take it easy after church, enjoy the meal and the fun. Reservation forms will be in the newsletter and bulletins in coming weeks. You can spend early afternoon here, go home and rest and then attend the festivities that will be going on downtown for the holiday. It will be a celebration!

A WORD FROM KORY

I ran my very first 5K race on Monday. Don't be impressed; "ran" is a relative term. I will admit to setting my personal best time, but I think riding the last mile in the ambulance may have helped. Overall, it was a very positive experience and one I hope I can do again as soon as I get the feeling back in my legs. As I was reflecting on the race, it dawned on me that what I experienced during those 3.1 miles is similar to what I experience in my own faith.

As the race began and the participants left the starting line, I took off at a brisk trot, speeding by the runners pushing their kids in strollers and the guy in the cow costume (the run was sponsored by Chick-Fil-A). "This is easy!" I thought as I sped along. We have moments of faith like that, don't we? These are high points in our lives where Heaven feels so close we can touch it. I think of times like my wedding day, the birth of my children, or even a particularly moving worship service. At these times, praising God comes as natural to us as breathing.

Speaking of breathing, after a fast start I settled into a leisurely pace: not too fast but faster than the Chick-Fil-A Cow. So far so good. Things were moving along steadily and I was feeling generally optimistic, much like when our lives are in their comfortable routines and no crises are looming. At those times, God can be a constant companion, walking alongside us as we go through our day. We're not in any great need to call on our faithful reserves but we're also not floating on a spiritual high, either.

Sometimes, we face small setbacks. As I was running, I took a water cup from the volunteers at the one-mile mark. Two questions struck me: (1) how do you drink from a Dixie cup while you're running? and (2) I've only gone one mile?!? I was able to get about 10% of the water in my mouth (the other 90% splashed down the front of my shirt) but was a bit disheartened by my distance. I felt like the finish line should be coming anytime now, but I was only one-third of the way home.

Our faith can be similarly tested, not in earth-shattering, life-changing ways, but in the small disappointments and frustrations that chip away at our spiritual resolve. A family illness, bad news on the job, or the downsizing of a dream can cause us to start questioning what we believe and why we believe it. It's not enough to make us quit running, but we can start to doubt our self-worth and ability to finish the race.

During these times, God often comes to us in the support of those around us. As the young man handed me my cup of water, he said, "Keep going, you're doing great!" I wanted to say, "Really? The race officials are timing me with a calendar!" But I took his words to heart, and the seemingly genuine enthusiasm with which he expressed them buoyed my spirit and gave me the strength to keep putting one foot in front of the other. Sometimes that's the best we can do.

I made it to the halfway point, which was at the end of a gently sloping hill that felt like running up Mt. Everest. As I came back by the volunteer table, I ordered a Banana Pudding Milkshake. Sadly, all I got was another cup of water that I knew I would be wearing until the finish line.

Right after I passed the two-mile mark, the voice started. "Don't you want to stop? You're close enough. No one will know. A good rest right now will help you finish strong." From where did that voice come? My legs? My lungs? The place inside me that says, "You're not good enough?" We all hear that voice in our lives, don't we? That voice that tells us we don't need to go to worship every Sunday ("You deserve a break") or help out on a service project ("Someone else will do it") or give our hard-earned money to the church ("That's your money, not God's"). And if we listen to and follow that voice, we eventually find ourselves farther away from God that we had ever planned to be. It's always good to ask ourselves, "To what voice am I giving the most credence? God's, or that other one?"

Finally, the finish line was in sight. I pushed through the pain, the ache and a cluster of eight-year-olds running in front of me to cross the line. I was exhausted, dehydrated (although my shirt had received plenty of water) and completely spent. I didn't set any land-speed records, but I finished. I don't believe God calls us to run our race of life with great speed or with super-human endurance. I believe we are simply called to run faithfully. I pray that in whatever we do as Christians, we are able to, as Paul says, "Run with perseverance the race marked out for us, fixing our eyes on Jesus, the pioneer and perfecter of faith."

COLETTE'S CORNER

by Colette Lane

There's been so much bad news recently. What with the floods, tornadoes, and other forces of weather, the devastation is unimaginable. Within just one week, our family has been made aware of the sudden death of a friend, the hospitalization of another and upcoming surgery for still another. We don't want to turn on the TV for fear of what might be coming next. So, how do we respond to all that is going on around us?

Specifically, if you want to help the flood and tornado victims right now, you may make a donation to the Week Of Compassion with a memo for disaster relief on your check. You may put it in the offering plate and it will be sent or you can send it to the church office designated as a WOC gift with the same memo.

In responding to the concerns of those close to us, we can do several things. Even if we don't know exactly what to say, our presence speaks volumes so visit, call or send a card. If appropriate at the time, food can be taken. An offer to do an item from the "To do List" of the person might also be welcomed. Showing your care in your own special way is what is important.

With all that is going on, it is easy to focus on the negative. However, that is not healthy physically or spiritually. So, we must also be intentional about taking care of ourselves. We must get the proper rest, eat regularly, exercise and do something fun!

If we don't take care of ourselves, how will we have anything to give? Spiritually, we need quiet meditation time with prayer. We need the community of faith who will share our concerns and burdens. We need to remember that through it all, God will not leave us comfortless! And that, my friends is the GOOD NEWS!

Glad to be one of your ministers,
Colette

GOT QUESTIONS? TAKE A CRASH COURSE!

Would you like to know more about Crestwood? On Sunday, July 2, we'll be holding a "Crestwood Crash Course" after the 10:45 a.m. worship service in the Administration Wing. This is a great opportunity to meet some of the leadership of the church, learn more about Crestwood and ask any questions you might have.

VIEW FROM THE SOUTH WING - BY CAROLYN MILLER

My favorite law professor gave a lecture to remind us that we didn't graduate from law school without a lifetime of love and support. We were standing on the shoulders of our parents, teachers, and all who made us get up, go to school and finish what we started.

I think of this lecture when I look at Crestwood's children. I am astonished by their creativity, intelligence and spirit. They fiercely love God and one another. They are kind, thoughtful and very funny. And I know they didn't get this way without the loving guidance of their parents.

Crestwood has amazing parents. I am in awe. On any given day, our parents are doctors, teachers, magicians, cooks, drivers, organizers, referees and entertainers. Their juggling skills are better than any circus act. Merely getting a family ready for church on a rainy Sunday morning is more daunting than leading an army into battle. Parenting has no days off, no retirement age. Whether your children are 3, 6 or 36, they need love and support. There is no better example than Crestwood's parents.

To all of you, parents of the young or not so young, I offer my praise and thanksgiving. You are simply awesome.

SHARE OUR SKILLS

Do you love to read? Do you garden? Got a recipe worth sharing? We are looking for volunteers to share their time with our children during the Sunday school hour this summer. We have 11 Sundays from June 5 to August 14 that we are using to take the kids beyond the South Wing. There will be two age groups, preschool-1 grade and 2-5 grade. You can work with one group, both groups, or split between weeks. You can take one week or a month. Email Carolyn at Carolyn@crestwoodchristian.org or call the church office to sign up.

Update of Last Year's Disciples for Habitat Build

Dana Stefaniak, Resource Development Director of Lexington Habitat for Humanity gave us an update of the Trina Burroughs family, whose home the Disciples for Habitat built last year.

When she leaves home in the morning for her commute to work, the last thing Trina Burroughs expects to hear is a gunshot. Instead, she hears birds chirping, greetings from her neighbors and the swish of traffic.

Tucked into a quiet subdivision off Georgetown Street, her cozy four-bedroom home is surrounded by friendly, hard-working neighbors who greet each other by name, look out for one another's kids and chat about the news and the weather.

But things haven't always been this way for Trina, a single mother of three who moved to Lexington a few years ago after a shooting near her old home in Flint, Michigan.

"It was horrible, just very scary," she said. "We stayed with my mother for two weeks because I was afraid the shooter might have seen me." A short time later, Trina moved to Lexington to start a new life. She had no idea that she would soon be signing a mortgage for a brand-new home. With the help of Lexington Habitat for Humanity and her sponsor, the Disciples for Habitat, Trina now has a safe home in a great neighborhood. "It's beautiful," she said. "I'm so grateful."

Long-time supporters of Lexington Habitat, the Disciples for Habitat has sponsored 27 homes. In 2010, the group contributed more than 2,000 hours of volunteer work on Trina's home. Made up of members from twelve Lexington Disciple congregations, Disciples for Habitat on June 4th will receive the 2010 Governor's Award for Volunteerism and Service for its dedication to Lexington Habitat's mission to provide simple, decent, affordable housing for some of the area's poorest citizens.

Trina worked with Lexington Habitat to pay off her debt and put in 250 hours of homeownership training and volunteer labor with the organization. She worked alongside Disciples for Habitat volunteers to build her home, one of the few Lexington Habitat homes built with a garage and brick front. She is happy that she can now raise her three children in a safe environment. In fact, Trina loves the area so much that she encouraged some of her family members to relocate to Lexington from Michigan. Her older sister, her younger brother, her aunt and two of her cousins now live in Lexington.

Her children are thriving in their new home. Her son Paris, 15, plays football at Dunbar High School. Her oldest daughter, Diamond, 12, a student at Leestown Middle School, is a typical pre-teen who likes texting her friends. Her youngest, 3-year-old Tiara, is crazy about SpongeBob. "They are very happy," said Trina. "It feels good to have a safe place for them to grow up. Sometimes they say how boring it is here, but I tell them it's better to be bored and safe than always having to worry about your safety."

REMEMBERING JACK CAUDILL

Jack Caudill was one of those people I considered a privilege to know. He and his wife, LaVonne, attended early church service so I rarely saw them on Sunday mornings, but during the years I coordinated the Mission Center volunteers and spent time at the desk, I saw and talked with Jack often.

The thing I recall most about him is his cheerfulness. He was always in good humor. He enjoyed his service to the church and took his responsibility seriously. He especially liked it when boys came in to shoot hoops in the afternoons or when the Child Care kids came over to play. He took pleasure in meeting everyone who came through the door.

He would always call if he couldn't show up and despite his years of dealing with health issues, the only reasons he ever gave were that he was out of town or in the hospital. His eyes lit up when he spoke of his family- his wife, his children and grandchildren. He always had something positive to say. One couldn't ask for a better legacy.

~Virginia Long

REMEMBERING SANDY THOR

I first met Sandy Thor when her husband Gary, aka "Thor", brought her to a party at our fraternity house. She lit up the room for she was so beautiful. It wasn't long before we all realized that she was special. Sandy soon became a "big sister" to all of Thor's brothers, a natural for someone with six brothers at home. While planning their wedding, Sandy and Thor met David Blondell. They asked him to perform their ceremony, thus a strong bond with Crestwood was formed and continues today. Sandy was strong in her faith and the glue that held her family together. After learning of her death, one of our fraternity brothers said that Sandy was a true lady and will be missed by all who knew and loved her. Please join me and continue to hold "Thor", Jason, Alex, Donna and their family in your prayers.
