

Spotlight on Crestwood Brief Update

The spotlight has flickered this last few weeks. I have been discombobulated with severe back pain and medication. I've tried, but can't make the deadline.

I am disappointed because I looked forward to sharing with you a number of really interesting intertwining stories I uncovered about the Patrick Lafferty Memorial Garden. They take more thought and concentration than I can muster now. So, I hope you will stay tuned...

This might be the time to tell you a few miscellaneous things that I have picked up as I've heard from members about the spotlight articles of the past. I've really enjoyed hearing from you all:

When looking in the Nooks and Crannies of the church, we found strange bags under the stage and suggested they might be hidden bodies! Several members kindly told me that's where the Christmas trees are kept.

Bill McDonald talked about planning the storage space when they expanded and redid the stage area, but worried if it would be strong enough with the hollow space underneath. On the day of dedication all members got on the enlarged area for pictures. He held his breath, but it stood strong!

As to the large mural of Superheroes covering the wall in the basement, that was painted by Bill's son who must be quite an artist.

Several people have mentioned the missing Memorial Book that lists every donation given to Crestwood over the years. Supposedly it was in an enclosed case in the Chapel and then Narthex. If anyone knows the whereabouts, let us know. It is probably somewhere safe and sound and I haven't asked the right people yet.

I look forward to a clear brain soon and will have new batteries for the Spotlight stories. Thank you for your interest.

If there is some area of the church you would like to know more about, please share your ideas with me. Let's explore together.
